Wartime Repressions Report. August 2023

Русская версия

Eighteen months ago, Russia initiated a full-scale war against Ukraine. Immediately after the breakout of anti-war protests in the first days of the invasion, an unprecedented wave of repression began within Russia.

OVD-Info continues to gather and analyze data about persecutions due to anti-war stances in Russia and in the territory of the annexed Republic of Crimea.

RESTRICTION OF THE RIGHT TO FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY

19 786

detentions for anti-war stance between 24 February 2022 and 20 August 2023

We are aware of 19,096 detentions directly during the protests, and 326 after them. For posts on social networks, private conversations, symbols, and other reasons, there were 364 detentions.

Also, we were able to identify gender of the detained individuals in 19,186, or 97%, of the 19,786 cases. Specifically, 8,609 detentions pertain to women involved in anti-war actions from February 24, 2022 to August 20, 2023.

On the 20th of August, four individuals conducting solitary anti-war rallies were detained. Specifically, in Khabarovsk, local police apprehended a resident named Bogdan Shevchenko, who took to the square holding a sign that read «No to vobla» accompanied by a fish illustration (signs with this slogan have been used at protests to indirectly declare anti-war sentiments, because «vobla» is a type of fish, but the characteristics of the word itself, including the length and the first and last letters, mirror the word «war» in Russian).

A case was initiated against a 16-year-old student from the village of Sosva (Sverdlovsk region) due to his posts calling for the arson of military recruiting offices, considered a public call for terrorism (part 2 of Article 205.2 of the Criminal Code). Sociologist Boris Kagarlitsky was taken into custody due to publications related to the explosion on the Crimean Bridge. A resident of a restricted-access town and her underage children were summoned for questioning in a case related to discrediting the army — the children are being questioned as witnesses in the case.

The Soviet City Court of the Kaliningrad Region declined to release Igor Baryshnikov, who was convicted for spreading «fake news» about the military, for his mother’s funeral. Baryshnikov and his defense had requested that he be escorted under guard to attend his mother’s funeral, as she passed away on the 7th of August at the age of 96. Baryshnikov himself was sentenced on July 22 to seven and a half years in prison under the article related to disseminating false information about the Russian army, motivated by political hatred (part «d» of Article 207.3 of the Criminal Code).

The underage high school student Yegor Balazeykin, accused in the case of arson against the military recruiting office, is experiencing progressing liver fibrosis.

During the hearing on the extension of custody for the defendants in the case against the «Vesna» movement, bailiffs used force against the wife of one of the defendants, Yevgeniy Zateyev. Later, an administrative protocol was drawn up against her.

Andrey Balin, a former member of PARNAS (People's Freedom Party, a liberal-democratic political party, one of the first opposition parties created in the final years of the Soviet Union), who was convicted due to anti-war posts, was threatened with a shank by a fellow inmate. He instigated the threat by speaking negatively about Vladimir Putin.
